

How an Idea Becomes a Law in North Carolina

NOTES

- Bills may originate in either chamber. In this simple example, the bill originated in the House of Representatives.
- A bill can stall or stop at any point in the process.
- Local bills that affect fewer than 15 counties, appointments bills, redistricting bills, constitutional amendments and joint resolutions are not subject to veto. Public bills that apply to all citizens of our state are subject to veto.
- Click on underlined terms to link to more information.

Questions about the process? Call the Legislative Library at 919.733.9390

<https://www.ncleg.gov/Library/>